Dear Valued Partner,

I recently wrote about the allegations concerning our products. I made it clear in that letter that our first commitment is to our customers and I write to you today to reiterate that commitment.

The security of our customers and the integrity of our products are core to our business and our company values. We take care to secure the integrity of our products throughout the manufacturing process and follow rigorous industry quality and security standards. With respect to the recent media reports, we have seen no evidence of any unauthorized components in our products, no government agency has informed us that they have found unauthorized components on our boards, and no customer has reported finding any such unauthorized components.

Because Supermicro takes all security claims very seriously, we have engaged forensic and technical experts and we are conducting a thorough internal investigation.

We are committed to delivering the best products to our customers, and the security of those products is a cornerstone of that commitment. I understand you have questions, and we will bring important updates to your attention.

Sincerely,
